Atlantic Salmon - Lost At Sea!

Lost at Sea takes the viewer on an epic journey through the oceanic kingdom of the Atlantic Salmon -the king of fish - in an attempt to unravel the mystery of their life at sea. Some populations of salmon are plummeting to critical levels. Despite conservation efforts worldwide, populations continue to fall. The cause is mortality at sea. For the very first time, using the latest DNA technology, scientists are able to track the salmon from the rivers, through the estuaries and into the vast North Atlantic and back again in hopes of finding an answer before it is too late. This film tells the most complete story of the life of Atlantic salmon - something not possible before.

The film is being shown by kind permission of Castletown Productions

Prior to the film showing, Mr Ralph Holmes will give a brief talk on the local history of fish protection in the Tweed estuary.
